WETASKIWIN FIRE

Further details of yesterday morning's disastrous fire in Wetaskiwin have been received and go to show that our estimate of the loss in yesterday's daily was quite conservative. Instead of $200,000 the total loss will run beyond $250,000. The fire commenced at 2.40 o'clock and in the short space of one hour and a half the different buildings were entirely destroyed. The fire originated in Heric's Hall and when the alarm was given the whole inside of the hall and of Heric's store were in a mass of flames. The buildings burned like matchwood and the fire spread with great rapidity. The salvation of the town was the brick wall of Schmidt's wholesale liquor store, for here the firemen made a stand and by tearing down several surrounding buildings, got the fire under control. A light drizzle of rain fell during the first couple of hours of the fire and this afterwards increased to a regular deluge and the goods removed from the stores to avoid the fire were destroyed by the rain. Nothing was saved from Heric's store and out of twenty-two trunks of special stage costumes belonging to the Clara Hanmer Company, which had showed in the hall the previous evening, only three were saved. A fruit store and real estate office were next swept up by the fire. The Criterion Hotel was soon in flames in a dozen places and a scene of wildest excitement prevailed. The hotel was full of guests, land seekers, etc., and in the stampede which followed the alarm of fire it is a miracle that lives were not lost. A man with his wife and family who were coming to visit a relative in the Edmonton district, and who had the proceeds of their earthly belongings in a pocketbook with them, escaped from the fire, but the pocketbook and contents were destroyed. A livery stable was the next in order. Most of the contents were removed but the building was burned to the ground. The billiard parlors which adjoined it met the same fate. The Druid Hotel then caught fire and burned fiercely. The fire crossed the street and licked up West's store, where a $125,000 stock of goods was stored and not a dollar's worth was saved. J. W. McNamara's real estate office, Wilkie's law office and Bowsarge's book store were entirely destroyed and the contents ruined. The next building was Schmidt's wholesale liquor store, which was completed, gutted, but the brick walls of which stopped the fire.

We have thus far only traced the course of the fire, over which every building was burned to the ground. Many other buildings in the neighborhood were on fire at different times. Everything was removed from the stables, the Times printing office, the Imperial Bank and other places, and the buildings certainly destroyed. The fire is a great calamity to Wetaskiwin, but her citizens are progressive and enterprising and before long the major portion of the fireswept blocks will be rebuilt with more imposing and substantial buildings.

The catch basin at the corner of Namayo and Jasper avenues was washed out by water running down the side of the basin. The work has had to be abandoned until everything dries up and the contractors have been put to considerable extra expense.

This should be a warning to others, for in future such cases will be severely dealt with.

FRANK OUT OF DANGER

R. S. McConnell, of the Dominion geological survey, after a two weeks' examination of Turtle Mountain reports as follows:—

"In my opinion, these fissures which we found on the top of the mountain are not very dangerous. There are such a number of them that I think will allow the disintegration of the lime rock to continue, but only in small quantities. This will likely result in a considerable number of small slides from time to time, but I do not think the disastrous one of last April will be duplicated. The action of the water and the elements is still constantly loosening masses of the rock, and the lime dust of small slides was seen nearly every day while I was there, and I believe these small slides are still taking place. The question of the magnitude of any large slide in the near future depends a good deal on the depth of the fissures at the mountains. If they extend to a considerable depth they may thus allow larger masses to become detached, but from what I saw of them I do not think they will. By the way, that volcanic theory which was at first advanced as the cause of the disaster was quite excusable considering that the mountain did actually appear to be smoking. This was caused by the clouds of limedust that were raised by the small slides which followed the first big one. As far as I can learn, only one person actually saw that terrible occurrence. This was the conductor of a train that was leaving Frank that morning.

A LESSON FROM WETASKIWIN

Yesterday morning's disastrous fire at Wetaskiwin should be a warning to a number of other towns on the Calgary and Edmonton railroad. It is unfortunate for Wetaskiwin to have to serve as an object lesson, but if the other towns will profit by Wetaskiwin's case, the fire will not have been an unmixed evil. A section of the principal business portion of this flourishing town has been burned to the ground with an approximate loss of almost $250,000. There is not the slightest doubt that had there been an efficient fire engine the loss would have been much less. It is nothing more or less than an intervention of providence which has saved western towns from complete destruction by fire on numerous occasions. Large frame structures are hurriedly built up in a new town without any regard to fire protection, and there they stand as the town grows, as veritable fire traps. At various times sums of money are spent on different schemes for fire protection, such as fire extinguishers, etc. If the money so expended would be used entirely to provide a good fire engine and several hundred feet of hose, the town would have a fire protection system on which it could rely. Such expenditure would seem quite heavy to those who merely consider the present. But the future has to be taken into account. It is safe to say that all the buildings which have been burned in Wetaskiwin will not be rebuilt; and besides the great losses of individuals the town as a whole will experience a considerable loss from the fire. In fact the amount of the loss suffered by the town would have gone a very considerable distance towards providing adequate fire protection. The lesson taught by this fire must not be disregarded. Few towns on the Calgary and Edmonton railway are in a position to bear the loss just suffered by Wetaskiwin, and no place should leave itself open to try the experiment.

New Postage Stamps

Ottawa, June 19.—On Dominion Day the post office department will issue new postage stamps, and those who have had an opportunity of seeing copies of them, speak most approvingly, both of the design and workmanship. The stamps bear the likeness of the King copied from the latest portrait of his Majesty, being the one painted since his accession to the throne and presenting him in royal robes of scarlet and ermine, and now in York House, the London residence of the Prince of Wales. In each of the upper corners of the stamp is a Tudor crown, and in the lower corner, a maple leaf, with a numeral indicating the denomination of the stamp. The portrait of the King is a striking and admirable likeness of His Majesty.

Bulletin Correspondence.

Yesterday's session of parliament, from three o'clock in the afternoon until nearly three o'clock this morning, was occupied by the ex-minister of public works in defining his position towards the government and opposition, respectively, on the questions of tariff and transportation. Ever since Mr. Tarte left the government, his expressed views on questions of public policy have placed him more nearly in line with the opposition than with the government, and last night's resolution debate, and vote removed any doubt there may ever have been as to his opinion and aspirations. The resolution promised by the leader of the opposition during the budget debate, and afterwards moved by him and voted upon in the House, defined his position and that of his party as being pledged to a distinct policy of high tariff. Whatever the resolution may have lacked in definiteness as establishing this point was made up by the speeches in debate and by the further resolution afterwards proposed by the leader of the opposition, declaring especially for protective duties in favor of the production of raw iron. The ex-minister of public works voted for both these resolutions, and was the only member reckoned as a follower of the government who did so. This should have sufficed to make his position clear, but still he was not satisfied and out-Heroded Herod in his declaration for unlimited protective duties in the following resolution:—

"This House desires to express the opinion that in order to assure the permanency and the further progress of the existing industries, as well as the creation of many new ones that only wait the proper policy to spring up to inspire greater confidence to Canadian, British and foreign capital; to secure for the farmers now tilling our soil and those that we invite to share the blessing of our institutions and the wealth that providence has placed at our disposal, the full advantages of a prosperous home market; to comply with the legitimate desire of the working classes to see their labor rewarded by fair and uninterrupted wages and by comfort in their families; to render impossible the slaughtering of our markets by the produce of foreign industries, of foreign combines of foreign agriculture and of cheap labor countries; to bring about a quicker development and a more rapid expansion of our vast resources; to promote closer commercial relations between the different provinces of the Dominion and between the Dominion and the mother country;

"It is the bounden and imperative duty of the government to revise and readjust, without delay, the present tariff in such a manner as to leave no doubt as to the determination of the Canadian people to adopt and maintain a fiscal policy adequately and firmly protective of the large national interest at stake. And also to carry out an energetic transportation policy which will give to our merchandise and products of all kinds, commodious, quick and cheap access to the markets of our country and to those of foreign nations trading with us."

He had followed the opposition in the two instances, but now he was bound that the opposition should follow him, and they did to a man; while for the third time he was the only member on the government side voting with the opposition for the policy of so-called "adequate" protection, otherwise a prohibitive tariff. The feature of the debate was the enthusiasm with which the members of the opposition, from the leader down, endorsed the most extreme position taken in the resolution and the most extreme statements made by its mover. To them there is only one cure for every national ill, past, present, or prospective, and that is to pile on the duties and increase the expenditure. Not only were the duties not high enough, but it was made apparent from the arguments of the opposition members that no duties would be considered high enough as long as any interested party asked for their increase. In their estimation the merry task of piling on taxation should be a game without a limit, and the same applies to their expressed ideas regarding expenditure. The leader of the opposition attacked the government because they had not announced a transcontinental transportation policy, being entirely dissatisfied with the scope of the proposition now before the House, which provides for the immediate construction of over seven hundred miles of railway in the Northwest.

The minister of finance replied for the government most effectively. While the opposition were talking transportation the government had been acting in securing the construction of the railway above mentioned, and would be prepared to take further action as circumstances required, and conditions permitted. The government had been advised by Mr. Tarte that now when it had an immense surplus was a suitable time to revise the tariff by increasing it. It was the first time that he had ever heard that the fact of a country having an unusually large revenue was a good reason for increasing its taxation. The government might be open to attack for not having revised the tariff in the way of reductions in view of their large surplus, but the opposition had insisted that they should increase it. Mr. Tarte had drawn comfort from the idea that Britain was becoming protectionist, but within the week, only twenty-eight members could be found in the British House of Commons to vote for a duty on wheat. The Chamberlain policy of reciprocal preferences admittedly took its rise from the Canadian preferential tariff. He wished Mr. Chamberlain well in his campaign, but he had not yet achieved success and might not for some time. It had been said that high protection was the cause of the higher wages in the United States as compared with England, but if that were the case, how was it that in still more highly protective France and Germany wages were much lower than they were in free trade England.

The vote stood 102 to 50 against Mr. Tarte's resolution.

Further supplementary estimates for the current year were laid on the table. The amount is somewhat over five million dollars. The votes are to meet expenditure already incurred and include amongst other items $250,000 for the Northwest government. This is the amount which the Northwest government is short in meeting its expenditure of last season, chiefly on account of the extraordinary weather conditions prevailing and the rapid increase of settlement. It is understood that the supplementaries for the coming year will contain an equal amount, increasing the sum available for expenditure next year to nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. It is also understood that a large sum will be made available for the uses of the government of the Territories on capital account.

Winnipeg Markets

Commercial, June 20th.

Wheat.—In the Winnipeg market there has been no change in conditions from a week ago, the same dullness rules. For the most part large buyers are out of the market and the demand has been light, although slightly better towards the end of the week. Prices have gradually followed to some extent the advice in outside markets and yesterday forenoon for a very short interval 80c for No. 1 hard was touched, this being the first time it has touched this figure since June 3rd, 1901. At the close of business yesterday prices were: No. 1 hard, 79 3-4c; 1 northern, 78 1-2c; 2 northern, 76 1-4c; 3 northern, 72 1-4c, and No. 4 wheat, 67 1-4c, spot, June or July delivery, in store, Fort William and Port Arthur.

Oats.—At Fort William the market is 1-2c firmer, and on track here there is also a firmer tone, although some large buyers say the market is top heavy. Local feed merchants pay 32c per bushel for cariots of No. 1 white on track here and 31c for 2 white, feed grade, 29 to 30c. At Fort William No. 1 white oats are worth 32 1-2c per bushel, No. 2 white, 31 1-2c.

A Murderer Killed

Glasgow, Mont., June 19.—William Hardee, the condemned murderer, who, with three other prisoners, escaped from the city jail here two weeks ago, after killing one guard and beating two others almost to death, has been shot and killed in the bad lands, seventy-five miles from this city, after a desperate battle with the posse under Sheriff Cosner.

Charles R. Hill, one of the posse, received wounds from which he died in a short time. Fred McKinney, Hardee's outlaw companion, escaped after the battle, but his capture is believed to be certain.

When the news reached this city late last night, a mob was quickly formed. The guard at the jail was overpowered, and Jack Brown, one of Hardee's companions, who was recaptured, was taken from his cell and hanged from a window in the county court house.

The Gordons and the Canadians

Ottawa, June 19.—Sir Frederick Borden has received through Lord Minto from the first battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, a memento of their service with the Canadian Royal Rifles in South Africa, a trophy for presentation to the Dominion Rifle Association. The trophy represents a Gordon Highlander giving a drink of water to a Canadian rifleman over the bivouac fire. It is silver with an ebony pedestal, and the inscription reads as follows:

"Presented to the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association by the 1st battalion Gordon Highlanders in commemoration of their friendship and comradeship with the Royal Canadian Rifles and other Canadian contingents doing their service together on the 19th brigade and on other occasions in South Africa, 1899-1900-1901 and 1902."

Col. McBean, of the 1st battalion of Gordon Highlanders, in his letter to the minister, speaks of the comradeship that existed between them and the Canadians.
